

MARCH HIGHLIGHTS

- U.S. equities made a strong comeback in March, led by mid-cap stocks that gained 8.19%, according to the Russell Mid Cap index. Year-to-date, mid-cap and large cap equities outperformed small cap stocks, which finished the quarter with a loss of 1.52% as per the Russell 2000 index. Value stocks slightly outperformed core and growth across all market cap spectra in March. All S&P500 equity sectors had positive returns in March. Among those equity sectors, the energy and information technology sectors posted the largest returns, boosted in part by a recovery in the price of oil and persistently low interest rates. The healthcare sector continued to struggle in March and had the lowest, yet still positive, return of 2.77%.
- International equities also finished the month with strong returns, led by emerging markets equity, which gained 13.23%, according to the MSCI Emerging Markets index. This index also outperformed international developed markets large cap and small cap equities year-to-date. The performance differential between growth and value in the international equity space is less pronounced than that of domestic equity.
- The Federal Reserve's (the Fed) dovish stance on short-term interest rates may have contributed to fixed income's positive returns in March, with investment grade corporate bonds, represented by the Barclays US Corporate Investment Grade index, gaining 2.77%. One of the worst performing categories in 2015, high yield bonds, had a stellar month and posted a 4.44% return, as per the Barclays US HY 2% Issuer Cap index. High yield bonds have a high exposure to the energy sector, which benefitted from a rebound in crude oil prices.
- In the Focus Items category, gold finished the month with a modest return of 0.17%. However, year-to-date, gold is one of the best performing assets, gaining 16.70%. In March, the U.S. dollar lost against other major currencies such as the yen and the Euro.

There is no assurance that any investment strategy will be successful or that any securities transaction, holdings, sectors or allocations discussed will be profitable. It should not be assumed that any investment recommendation or decisions made in the future will be profitable or will equal any investment performance discussed herein. Fixed income securities are subject to interest rate risk. Generally, when interest rates rise, bond prices fall, and vice versa. Specific sector investing can be subject to different and greater risks than more diversified investments. Investing in small-cap and mid-cap stocks generally involves greater risks, and, therefore, may not be appropriate for every investor. International investing also involves special risks, including currency fluctuations, different financial accounting standards, and possible political and economic volatility. High-yield (below investment-grade) bonds are not suitable for all investors. When appropriate, these bonds should only comprise a modest portion of your portfolio. Commodities trading is generally considered speculative because of the significant potential for investment loss.

Specific sector investing such as real estate can be subject to different and greater risks than more diversified investments. declines in the value of real estate, economic conditions, property taxes, tax laws and interest rates all present potential risks to real estate investments
